Walk One

Muster at the Bargate

The walks will nominally be conducted by one guide per twenty persons, dependent on numbers booked on each walk.

Walk Two

Muster at the Bargate

1 Crew Memorial

Originally a drinking fountain, and made from Portland stone by local masons

Garret & Haysom, it was paid for by subscriptions from friends and family of the crew, and commemorates stewards, sailors and fireman who perished.

5 Canute Chambers

This was the former White Star Line offices. A memorial plaque marks the spot where relatives came and gathered, waiting for the latest news of the sinking and their loved ones, which was posted on the railings outside.

1 Sea City Museum

Sea City Museum tells the fascinating story of Southampton's historic connection with the sea.

Nowhere was the impact of the Titanic felt more strongly than in Southampton, and the Museum's Titanic Story is a must.

2 Gatti Memorial

This memorial, to the restaurant workers, including Luigi Gatti, is a plaque on an oak table.

6 Railway Terminus

Designed for the LSWR, and built in 1839, this was the railway station where passengers could alight and go straight into the Hotel.

2 Musicians' Memorial

Replica of the original memorial, destroyed in WW2, to Titanic's musicians. It shows a grieving woman and the musician's names.

3 Docks Post Office

The former Docks Post Office and Telegraph Office was where Titanic's mail was sorted prior to loading it on the ship.

7 Sailors' Home

Opened in 1909, and provided temporary accommodation for seamen whilst in port, including several on Titanic.

3 Engineers' Memorial

A tribute to Titanic's Engineering Officers, all of whom perished. The names include Thomas Andrews and the Guarantee Group.

4 South Western House

In 1912, this was a hotel where many of the First-Class passengers spent their last night before the voyage, including Thomas Andrews and J. Bruce Ismay.

8 The Grapes

Dating back to the 1850s, this is the famous pub where many of Titanic's crew had a drink prior to sailing, including the famous Slade brothers who stayed too long and missed the ship.

4 Postal Workers

A memorial plaque remembering the courageous British Sea Post officers and their three American colleagues, all of whom died in the sinking, as they tried to rescue the mail.

The planned visits on the walks are subject to confirmation on the day, and the time available. There will be other places that we also plan to visit along the routes, such as the Isaac Watts Statue, Milvina Dean Memorial Garden, Geddes Warehouse, Platform Tavern, Vokes memorial garden and Dock Gate Four. There, maybe even a couple of surprises as well. In addition, we plan to lay wreaths of remembrance at poignant sites along the way.
